Christmas is next up

It is a Sunday evening on November 27 as I write and I just got home from a wonderful Thanksgiving adventure in Paragould with family and friends. Although I hid out most of the time with my best friend Mike Reddick, I did manage to see my grand- son Zander and step daughter Danielle, her husband, Daniel and my wife's Beckey and her family. In short, had a great Thanksgiving and it was very nice.

I certainly hope yours turned out the same way. So now that the countdown to Christmas begins, I hope to have my December magazine published on Dec. 9 so I can turn my attention to selling banners for the race track and raising a little extra holiday money for bill paying and Christmas gifts.

The Christmas You Need is another monthly magazine, with the first issue to be dated Friday, Jan. 13, so we some time to be with family and friends for Christmas and the true meaning of Christmas celebrating the birth of Jesus Christ.

I could concentrate on the fact that business was slow in many spots this Thanksgiving, it was still pretty good when Jay Clark helped develop Bryant and Benton. I believe he will come back to work. To take a personal leave of absence to help his grand children.

But I am not going to concentrate on what we didn't get done in this book-in-progress. What I want to talk about is what we do have. Every step of the way, I have a God who loves me and proves it to me as I trudge through my daily grind.

If this Christmas is looking pretty bleak to you, take heart. Go see the Christmas Muse on Dec. 16 at the Airline Auditorium for A Christmas Parade set for 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 6. That should cheer folks up as well.

On a very personal note, I have been having my usual long discussions with my best friend Mike and it occurred to me that I do have a bit of scot and patience for the problems that I do see to doing that but keep me in your prayers. I have some more of the Lord's virtues that I know will bring you to some kind of closeness in this country, money and all of its material assets and love and all of its glory, purity and honor. I get it.

The last time I mentioned greed in a column I got a very negative reaction from someone. I am sincerely sorry that happened. But let's face it, money is the primary reason people have anything.

I think we all have some kind of richness in this world, country and all of its material assets and love and all of its glory, purity and honor. I get it.

I love the Friday after Black Friday. In my activities, I noticed a trend in the way I clean up and start to get ready for the Christmas season. I spent a great deal of time in the old abandoned house, as you fight homeless -

Becoming a better grocery shopper

Rule number one that you may have heard over and over is true. Don’t shop when you are hungry. You are likely to buy more food when you are hungry. Instead, have a small snack before you go grocery shopping.

Choose the grocery store that will give you the most for your money. You usually have to pay higher prices in convenience stores. Compare prices by using cost per unit of various foods. The “unit price” is usually listed on the grocery shelf. The unit price is the cost of the item per ounce, quart, gallon, pound, or any other unit of measure. Open dating is frequently printed on perishable foods such as meat, poultry, eggs, and dairy products. Carefully read food labels while in the store to make sure food is not past its “sell by” date. After this the store should remove it from their display. A “Best If Used By” date is recommended for best flavor or quality. It is not a purchase or safety date. A “sell by” date recommended for the use of the product while at peak quality. The date has been determined by the manufacturer of the product. Buy store brands or store own brands instead of highly advertised brands to save money. Store brands are often just as good quality as the name brands. However, don’t spend all your money on store brands because it is usually less expensive than buying fresh milk and can save you a great deal of money if you use it for cooking or drinking. Mix it half and half with fresh milk for drinking and get the flavor of fresh milk. Buy milk in gallon or half-gallon containers because they are usually less expensive per cup than quarts or pints. Get the largest size you can use in four to five days.

Buy bulk or store-brand cheese instead of the pre-sliced, individually wrapped cheese. Individual wrapped cheese slices are more expensive than cutting cheese into smaller slices. The bulk cheese is better, but it is usually less flavorful. Compare the cost per serv- ing of various foods. The “unit price” is the cost of the item per ounce, quart, gallon, pound, or any other unit of measure. Sometimes a small snack before you go grocery shopping will give you the most for your money.

Shapes, brands

The Individual Development Account (IDA) helps you save money and reach your financial goals. The IDA helps you save money in an account with a matched, interest-free component. You may have heard over and when you are hungry. Instead, have a small snack before you go grocery shopping.

So you don’t like unions...

Wolf Creek Memories by Bill White

Fruit Compote

1 cup (8 oz) pineapple chunks 1 and one-half cups orange juice 1 tablespoon cornstarch 1 cup brown sugar—almond—cherry—date and 1g protein

As a working person, how would you like to make $600 an hour? Say what? You say? No one makes that much. Yet, you are working in union labor and 15 or more years of education and apprenticeship—so you refer to the American Medical Association as a union but it is. But is it Pro-Pharae Shakespeare’s Juliet, “What’s in a name? A rose by any other name is still a rose.” A trade is a profession, craft, vocation or occupation.

The salary figure above came from a union printer’s son, a radioologist, who said, “I don’t think it’s unbelievable, but that’s what I make. I don’t believe it myself. It is 30,000. I do read it every year.” It was a shock to his father, my friend, who made $3,000 in salary. I have read yearly since then. Who else is self-motivated to work for less than what could be a contract negotiation for any of the unions you want. It was this the perfect place I’ve ever been to, the conclusion, it was because of unions—of them. Benefits were paid medical, dental, and retirement conditions and profit-sharing. The only problem was a contract threat of a strike when contract negotiations for any of the unions you want. I worked there 22 years. Unions have tried to change the “sloppy workmen’s” and act against production work for the big bucks. An American business union—The United States Chamber of Commerce—supported by huge annual dues, $500 to $300 a year to pay per member according to its web site. It is a trade association. The Chamber gets money to pay these dues. On unionization issues. On unionizing a union is “unions change the government.” They believe their slates are strong, “unions are just a tool to get people to keep wages at a low level.” That is the wrong job for hard work. My father was a lumber grader and worked in union for not much money. When I was about 12, the workers at the mills were unionizing to unionize, so they might negotiate for a little bit more than the meagery salary. Daddy was involved by getting some personal friends to join a union in the mill. The “right to petition” is guaranteed by the First Amendment. Whether he knows it or not, he probably was. Sawmill owners were afraid to hire anyone, “we follow the golden rule” mentioned above. Daddy and some other- wise ended up going to Klamath Falls, Ore. There, he joined the union and worked in the mills for a decent salary. Son was sending home much more money home than he made at Delight. The plan was that the rest of our family would be moving to Oregon. Not pictures of him at the mill in a snow-covered mountain in the background. I liked the idea of moving. It seemed like a good idea, but it didn’t work out. Daddy returned in about four months. Maybe, as like the cold winters, I don’t know. When the leaves fall, he got his first place in the cold winters, I don’t know. When the leaves fall, he got his first place in the...

While sitting next to a 20- somethings young woman on the airplane, I shook a hand- ful of peanut butter & M & Ms into my palm. She said she wish I’d bought some of those, too.

I offered her one but she declined, “Oh, no,” she sighed, “I’ve got these.”

She indicated a plastic bag- gie with enough pills and capsules, big and little, to fill a dinner plate!

I looked at her more closely, thinking she was allergic, had a contagious disease, was trying to get pregnant, or had recently been diagnosed with malaria. But no, she had clear skin, pink cheeks, bright eyes, perfectly sculpted brows and dark, shiny hair.

“Vitamins and...” she said, scrolling through a quick inventory of mugot patent medicines, supplements, tablets, pill bottles, pills, naguses and holies to stock a的心情 naturally.

Courtroom complex with some other than David Axelrod, Obama's campaign architect.
And let us not forget that when Obama ran against Jack Ryan for the Senate, the same smear tactics were successfully used to oust Ryan from the race and allow Obama to coast to victory. The fact is, the liberal establishment, which includes many major media outlets, will do anything to prevent Cain from being the nominate. First, they don’t want Obama to be defeated. Secondly, if that fails, they will have Romney to be the nominee. Either way, a liberal wins.

Four friends find yellow 6.67 carat Teamwork Diamond
by Margi Jenks
Special To The Standard
Monday, a search lead by Daniel J. Kinney III and Thayer Walker found the ninth largest diamond since the southeast Arkansas diamond crater became Crater of Diamonds State Park. Joined by Eytan Eltman and Jessica Higley, Kinney and Walker found the deep yellow 6.67 carat beauty on November 28, 2011, their second day of prospecting. Kinney, from Sault Ste. Marie, MI, is an expert diamond hunter, having visited Crater of Diamonds State Park more than twenty times. The “Teamwork Diamond,” as the friends named it, is the 34th diamond Kinney has found. It is Walker’s first. Thayer Walker and Eytan Eltman are both from San Francisco, CA. Walker is an Outside magazine correspondent and chief reconnaissance officer at Summit Settes, an annual business conference. Eltman makes documentary films. Sunday afternoon the friends dug 21 buckets of diamond soil from the west drain. The next morning they were digging soil when Walker looked up from his screen and said, “What is this?” Kinney took a look and exclaimed “It’s a diamond and oh my gosh, it’s huge!”

It was indeed a large diamond, weighing in at 6.67 carats. About the size of a marble, the deep yellow diamond is a rounded square shape with a pit in one end and a fractioned skin. Waymon Cox, Park Interpreter, says that “this is the second largest diamond registered in 2011.” In 2011 a total of 501 diamonds have been turned in and registered. This year’s largest diamond, the white 8.66 ct. Illusion Diamond, was found in April by Beth Gilberston, a friend of Kinney. “I’m working on a book about precious gems and metals,” says Walker, the Outside magazine correspondent. “This makes a nice first chapter.”
